Valencia is a long-standing MotoGP circuit located near the coast in the southeast corner of Spain, which is the driest part of Spain – hence the last GP of the year is always in Valencia!

It's a great track to ride and it benefits from 2 important differences as compared to most other circuits...

Firstly, it doesn't eat tyres, which saves you literally hundreds of Pounds!

And secondly, Valencia's left-handed layout makes it unusual and interesting to ride.

Average weather conditions in Oct are predominantly sunny & bright with an average of 8 hours of sunshine per day. Temperatures in Oct are ideal for track days too – on average it reaches a very comfortable maximum of 23 degrees during the day, which is ideal for riding bikes, or for strolling round the city checking out the amazing architecture!

And at night, the temperature falls to an average low of 13 degrees, which is equally comfortable for sleeping or exploring the city.

And there are lots of direct flights from the UK to Valencia, so getting there is easy too!

CIRCUIT INFO:

If you follow MotoGP or World Superbikes you'll have seen this circuit many times – 4km long, 12m wide, 876m main straight and 14 turns (9 left & 5 right).
